
Ye-Joon's Big Winter Catch

글쓴이: Ye-Joon & Mom

One chilly winter morning, Ye-Joon had a great idea. He was tired of staying inside. He looked at his father with big, excited eyes. "Dad, I really want to go fishing! Can we go?" Ye-Joon asked.

Mom heard them and joined in the fun. She looked at her phone and found something special. "Look! There is a Smelt Fishing Festival nearby," she said. Ye-Joon jumped for joy. "That looks perfect! Let's go!" Mom cheered.

They packed the car with snacks and blankets. Outside, the world was white with snow, but the car was warm and cozy. "Are we there yet?" Ye-Joon asked. Dad steered the car through the snowy hills. "Almost there, my little fisherman!" Dad replied.

The frozen lake was huge and shiny. Ye-Joon wore his thick black puffer coat and his favorite fuzzy trapper hat. It was very cold, but he felt like an explorer. Mom held his hand as they stepped onto the ice. "It feels like walking on a giant mirror!" Ye-Joon whispered.

Dad found a good spot and made a small hole in the ice. He gave Ye-Joon a tiny red fishing rod. Ye-Joon sat on a small chair and watched the water. He waited and waited. "The fish must be sleeping today," Ye-Joon sighed. Dad smiled and patted his back. "Just be patient," Dad said.

Suddenly, the fishing line wiggled! Ye-Joon pulled the rod up with all his might. A tiny, silver fish was dancing on the hook! "I caught one! Mom, look!" he shouted. Mom clapped her hands happily. "Wow! You did it, Ye-Joon!" she cheered.

After the first one, more fish started to bite! One by one, the smelts filled up the bucket. Dad helped Ye-Joon count them. "One, two... ten... twenty!" The bucket was full of splashing silver fish. Ye-Joon was the king of the ice!

As the sun began to set, Ye-Joon looked at his new friends. "They should go back to their moms and dads," he said softly. Mom smiled and helped him. They tipped the bucket, and the smelts swam back into the deep blue water. "Bye-bye, little fish!" Ye-Joon called.

On the way home, the car was quiet. Ye-Joon was very tired and quickly fell fast asleep. In his dream, he saw the smelts swimming in a circle. They all had little smiles and seemed to be saying "Thank you" for letting them go home.

When they arrived home, Ye-Joon woke up with a big yawn. He gave Mom a hug at the front door. "That was the best day ever," he said. He was already thinking of next time. "Mom, can we go fishing in the big ocean next summer?"
